

Atlantic City Gayeties Are Now In Mid-Summer Swing

Distinguished Guests Throng the Celebrated Boardwalk From Morning Until Night.

Atlantic City, May 23.—Warm weather brought, as might have been expected, distinguished visitors from all parts of the United States, and many foreign names also were registered at the most prominent hotels.

Among the dignitaries from Washington was the Secretary of War, who arrived Friday night, and who was joined by Mrs. Garrison, his wife, tonight. Every effort is being made to give the Secretary the rest he needs. The Garisons will be prominent figures on the Boardwalk until Monday, when it is probable they will return to Washington. A gay party attended Mr. and Mrs. Preston Gibson, of Washington, whenever they appeared on the Boardwalk, and the leader of the smartest social doings in Washington was constantly pointed out to passers-by. They left yesterday for Washington to attend the wedding of Miss Jennings and Mr. Hackett.

The new tango team on the Million Dollar Pier called out big crowds, and when a dancer showed up at any of the favorite places along the Boardwalk an audience quickly gathered. One of the greatest attractions at the Million Dollar Pier was in the free lessons in the maxixe, tango, and other up-to-date figures. Trouserette skirts or something so similar that mere man could not distinguish the difference are being worn on the Boardwalk. Two or three of the new semi-furcated garments were seen in the throng yesterday. And they were greeted with only passing comment.

Nothing seems to startle these days, and any revolution meets with but the ordinary observance. One really wonders what will cause a furore now.

Advance word comes from the National Wholesale Clothiers' Association, which meets here June 1, 2, 3, inclusive, that woman may have the laugh on mere man if she chooses, for there are many freak styles in store for the stronger sex. One of the "bathing" styles promised to come up for discussion is the real English cut, which takes one back to the days of the Macaronies of a hundred years ago. This English style is to the mere man what the hobble is to woman-kind. It is actually skin-tight, showing all the curves. Then again, the vest will be taken up for inspection. It may be cut to display twice the length of the necktie than is allowed now.

It will be a busy meeting, accompanied by models galore. This latter feature will be most edifying as well as instructive. Real fashioning, not the backwoods kind, but the Fifth Avenue variety, are to be brought along. Boardwalk revelations will likely count for naught in contrast, too.

Among the prominent Washington folk who arrived during the week was Mrs. Ellen Spencer Mussey, the woman lawyer, who will remain here for a few weeks, and then join her son, William Mussey, at his home on Long Island. Mrs. Jacob Kolmer and her three daughters, Misses Louise, Ruth, and Janet Kolmer, have come for an indefinite stay.

Mrs. M. M. Hamilton arrived during the week and is at the St. Clare. Mrs. Ida K. Woodbridge is at the Stanton, and Miss A. L. Edwards and Miss A. J. Owens came this week to the Holmshurst for a short stay. Mrs. James T. Duncan also came from Washington and joined Mrs. W. H. Walker at the St. Dennis. B. M. Miller, of Washington, is at the Barnay, and Miss D. Johnson, W. D. Davenport, Mrs. William H. Pines, Mr. W. J. Johnson, and Mr. G. G. Graven are at the Hotel Edison. Mrs. J. D. Webster came from Washington early in the week and is at the Richmond.

Gen. Maxwell Woodhull, who arrived last Saturday from Washington, and is stopping at the St. Dennis, is one of the most familiar figures on the Esplanade. Miss Woodhull accompanies him on all his outings on the walk.

Mr. and Mrs. John Bunney are by far the greatest attractions on the Boardwalk this week, everybody recognizing the big, funny man of the moving picture world, and pointing him out and following him up. Mr. and Mrs. Bunney, who are stopping at the Alhambra, return all the greetings given them.

Dr. T. L. Shearer, of Baltimore, known as "the hatless man," because he advocates going without that piece of headgear, spent some days at the St. Charles. Mr. William G. Heyler and wife, of Washington, were also at the St. Charles.

reached heretofore by rough and devious routes.

A similar highway is already planned to extend along the south water front of Locust Point and make that accessible. The great development at Port Covington, Tidewater terminal of the Western Maryland Railway, has been made since the fire, the railroad itself has been extended westward and its business greatly increased.

Vast Sum for Improvements.

Since the fire Baltimoreans have voted a debt upon themselves of $2,000,000 for public improvements and several other proposed loans are still pending to be voted on.

The money has been spent, or is being spent, on a great sewerage system, on municipal docks and the reconstruction of the water front, on smooth paving, a better water supply, on the large extensions and improvements of the park system, on new schoolhouses, new fire-engine houses, on conduits to carry underground the wilderness of overhead wires which cumbered the streets and almost blackened the light of heaven before the fire, on the widening and straightening and better grading of streets.

Nearly everybody can remember when St. Paul street, the boulevard, the thoroughfare, was so narrow as to be a mere alley; now the handsome plaza takes its place. Southward St. Paul and Light streets were narrow, forming a waterfront congested and inadequate as to very seriously hamper the transaction of business.

That whole section, one of the busiest in the city, is now a handsome. Broad streets instead of narrow are there, and plenty of room instead of congestion, and many fine and ornate buildings instead of the old, ramshackle, and rickety old warehouses in which Baltimore firms were wont to do business little more than a decade ago.

There has been a marvelous change in old Baltimore. Market square, filthy, crowded, and notoriously tough in the old days before the fire. The Maryland Institute, which lived over the old market, has moved to its own fine home on Mt. Royal avenue.

New Buildings Feature.

Since the fire Baltimore has added to its famous hostelry of former days such hotels as the Belvedere and the Emerson. It is a far cry from the old Eutaw House or even the Carlton to the great skyscraping houses of entertainment.

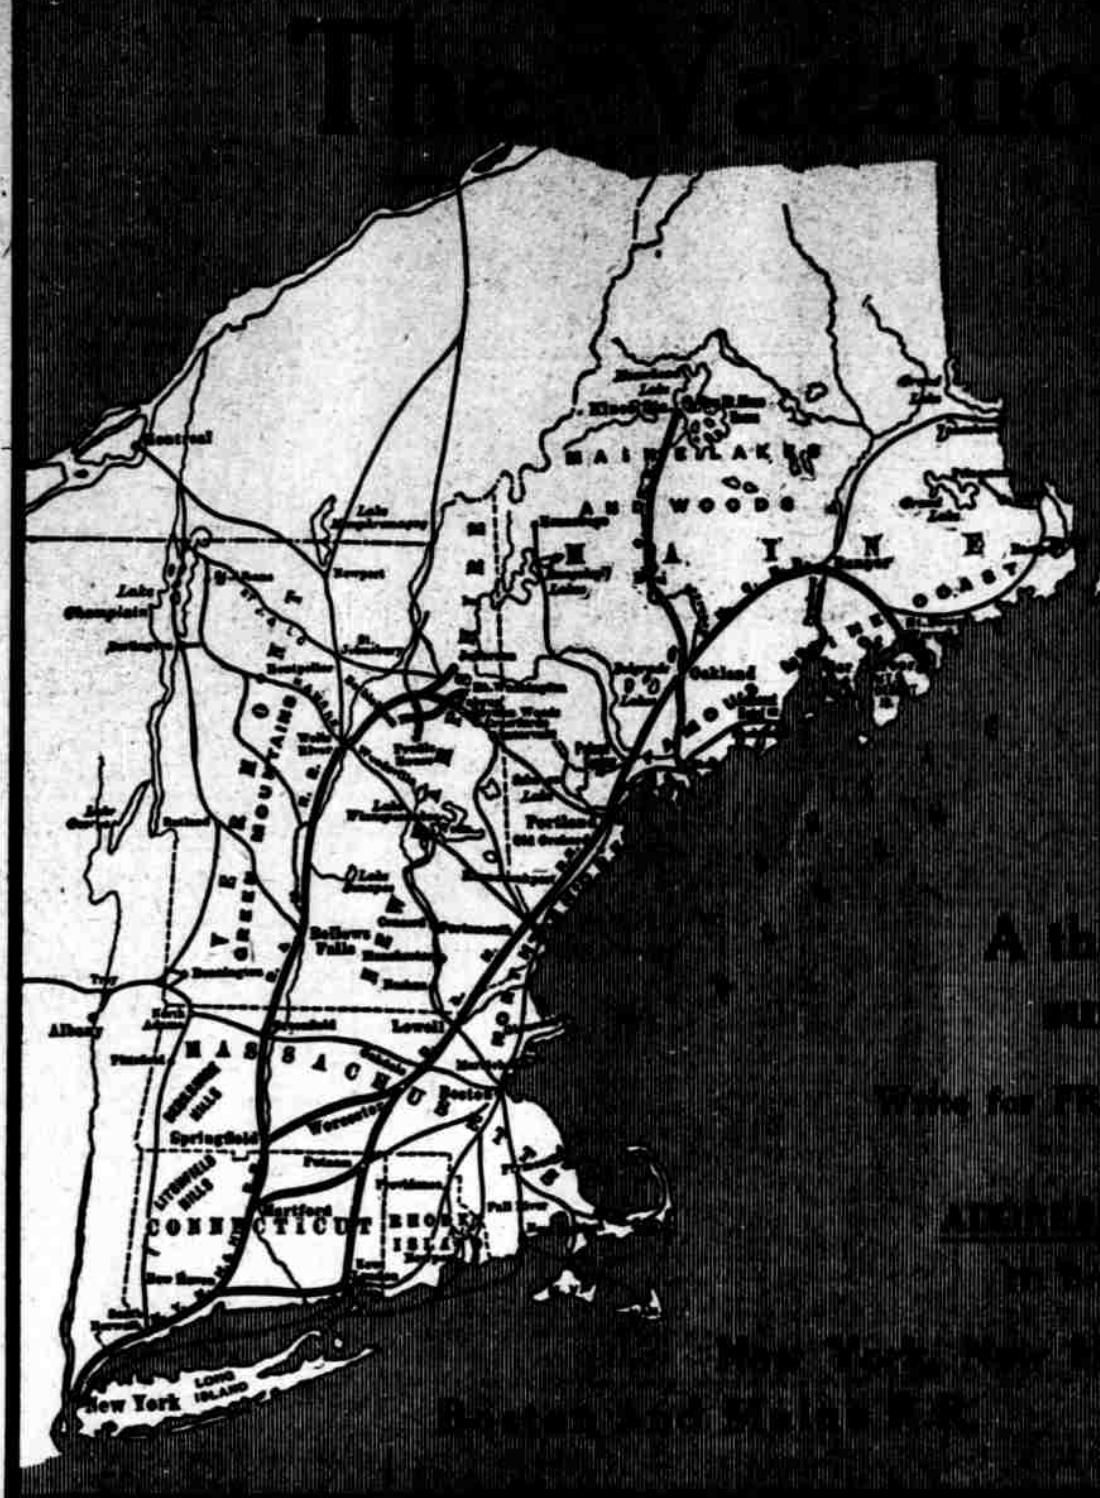

At the time of the fire the Calvert and the Continental Trust were almost the only really nice buildings in the city, and these were both gutted by the fire. Since that time there have been more than 150 miles of smooth paving, and thirty-five to forty miles being added every year.

Think of Then and Now.

Think of what Charles street above North avenue was a decade ago—uneven cobblestones with an uneven car track as far as Twenty-fifth street, thence northward a dirt road up a steep hill to Twenty-ninth street, where the road dipped into a ravine only to climb another steep hill on the other side.

After Twenty-ninth street one was in the country. The magnificent smooth and parked boulevard all the way to Roland Park, the handsome homes, the vista of lights at night were all to come within the past ten years.

So also was the Fallway, which will make a smooth, broad thoroughfare of what was before a dirt road. Coming also the Key Highway, along the water front on the north side of Locust Point peninsula, and which has opened up a part of the city which could only be

HOW BALTIMORE ROSE FROM RUINS

City Today Shows Remarkable Recuperation from Fire of 1904.

CIVIC SPIRIT AWAKENED

Old Residents Are Amazed by Transformation Brought About by New Conditions.

Baltimore, May 23.—Ten years ago nearly all the business section of Baltimore was still a waste, just beginning to rise from the ruins caused by the great fire on February 7, 1904, which swept eighty-six blocks and made a desert of 140 acres in the heart of the city.

Property had been destroyed, the value of which was estimated at $200,000,000, but upon which the total insurance collected was only $20,000,000.

Even Baltimoreans find it hard to realize the great changes that have been taking place in these last ten years and the work accomplished toward making this city a place of which to be proud.

Extends Into Beautiful Suburbs.

Not only has the entire burnt district been built up—with some hundreds fewer buildings, it is true, but much more valuable—but the city has grown and improved in every direction and a large part of the building has been done in such beautiful suburbs as Forest Park, Walbrook, Forest Park, and others outside the city boundaries.

According to estimates of the building inspector's office, the amount of building within the city itself within ten years exceeds $150,000,000 in value. Probably more than two-thirds of this was done within the burnt district.

Baltimore used to be known as a city of cobblestone pavements. At the time of the fire it had only seventy miles of what is known as improved paving, and much of that was in bad repair.

At the end of last year there were more than 157 miles of smooth paving, and thirty-five to forty miles being added every year.

Think of Then and Now.

Think of what Charles street above North avenue was a decade ago—uneven cobblestones with an uneven car track as far as Twenty-fifth street, thence northward a dirt road up a steep hill to Twenty-ninth street, where the road dipped into a ravine only to climb another steep hill on the other side.
